Dove Award Winning Artist Seth Condrey to Release First English Album

“More Than I See” is a challenging call to love and embrace a global perspective

Atlanta, GA – Dove Award winning artist Seth Condrey is releasing his debut English-speaking album, “More Than I See” (E1 Music) on June 2, 2009. Condrey is the worship pastor for North Point Community Church in Alpharetta, Georgia under the leadership of Pastor Andy Stanley.

Condrey’s album is an experiential combination of worship songs and rock tracks that encourage listeners to reach out in love to others—from local street corners to the ends of the earth. “In my travels, I’ve seen God’s heart for the world. I’ve grown spiritually and have been challenged to look outside of America and not get stuck in a box,” Condrey says.

“The album is my heart poured out over everything that’s happened in the last four years,” Condrey explains. Condrey’s journey includes extensive travels in South America, releasing his Dove Award winning Spanish album “De Corazón a Corazón” in 2007, signing a record deal with E1 Music, marrying his wife Jessica and having their first son, Titus.

The first radio single, “I Believe,” is a driving, catchy rock track. “I was going through a time where I was in doubt, asking questions and digging deeper into my faith, and discovered there’s so much more than we see. God’s intangible blessings of love and grace and mercy change us from the inside out. That’s what I want to be about, and that’s what this record is about.”

In the song “More Than America,” Condrey writes, “There’s so much more that we could be living for...” sharing his deep global perspective with listeners. He has the heart of a missionary, frequently traveling outside the U.S. to sing. “There’s something special about seeing different nations coming together to worship God through music,” Condrey says. “I love connecting with people through music.”

While Condrey’s heart for the world appeals cross-cultures, in the United States, he believes his message and experience will appeal to generations seeking more out of life in America. “This generation needs to recognize that God wants to rain down on us. There’s a lot of negative news happening in the world, but God is ready to move through us,” Condrey says. “I’ve experienced the love of Jesus in a real way. I can’t stop singing about it; it’s more real than the skin I’m wearing.”

After his relationship with God, Condrey’s family is primary. “Joy to Life” is an acoustic song about his young son Titus, written while Condrey watched him play on the floor. At 25, Condrey is a young dad learning the ropes of being a husband and father. “Something changed when our son was born. I looked at him and was completely overwhelmed with the thought of how God loves us unconditionally. I truly love my family.” The couple is expecting their second son in January.

Condrey, who grew up in South Carolina, lived in Argentina for a year, attending Bible school and learning to speak Spanish. He released an independent CD in 2002, followed by his album “De Corazón a Corazón,” in 2007, which took home “Spanish Album of the Year” at the 2008 Dove Awards. He and his wife and son live near Atlanta, Georgia. For more information on Seth Condrey, visit www.SethCondreyMusic.com or www.myspace.com/sethcondrey.

About Seth Condrey

Seth Condrey is a husband and father with a sincere and moving testimony of God's grace in his own life. Seth's aspiration is to share his story and his life with the hope that it will lead others into a deeper relationship with Jesus Christ. Seth is a gifted artist and worship leader who uses his abilities to teach, mentor and inspire people to receive the love of the one true living God he has personally experienced. "I have experienced the love of Jesus in a real way, and I want others to experience it as well."

Growing up in a family that traveled full time leading worship all over the United States, Seth was immersed in music as an expression of worship. At an early age, he discovered and was encouraged in his natural ability and passion for singing. He was exposed to a lot of Southern Gospel music as well, but as he got older he developed his own taste in music. "I've always been just a singer," says Seth, "but I wanted to become a worshiper that could lead with my guitar as well as my voice." Artists such as Steven Curtis Chapman, John Mayer and Dave Matthews inspired Seth to use the guitar to write his own melodies and lyrics.

By adolescence he was actually playing the guitar and began writing songs out of experience and a sincere desire to lead others in worship, hoping in the process to give something back to his boundlessly loving Creator. "God has spoken to me so much through music and I feel the need to offer what I can back to Him and to others in complete humility as a gift of appreciation for all that He has done in my life," he says. Seth has been leading people to the throne of God ever since.

Seth recorded his first independent album titled "My All" in 2002. Shortly after, he spent an entire year attending a Bible college in Argentina. With his perseverance and resolve, Seth was able to speak Spanish fluently. "My love for people has grown through the experiences God has put me in. As I've traveled to different places and met people that have a deep love for God, it's transformed my thinking and increased the love that burns in my heart for the world and for the God who created it," says Seth about his experiences in South America.

He was signed with the Spanish Christian label CanZion Group in 2006, and released his sophomore album "De Corazón a Corazón" in 2007. Shortly after signing with CanZion, Seth married his wife, Jessica and in the spring of 2007 they had their firstborn son, Titus. Also in 2007, Seth signed with E1 Music. In 2009, Seth will be releasing his debut English album titled "More Than I See," a message about God's greater plan for the world and how His plan is greater than "us" or our "America."

"I love people. I love people on the street. I love people in churches," says Seth. "I love people of all different walks of life, like the people that Jesus died for kind of people." He is currently leading worship at North Point Community Church and some of NPCC satellite branches. Seth's album "De Corazón a Corazón" won the Spanish Language Album of the Year at the 2008 GMA Dove Awards. When asked about the award, Seth said humbly, "So many people have poured into my life and believed that God could actually use someone like me. I honestly believe that about each and every person that I encounter. God can change them too, and He can use them for His glory."
